Another merchant for the good looks of Norway village and in a spirit of improvement has removed his swing sign and placed it over the entrance door to his place of business. This is E. B. Jackson at the meat and fish market. This sign was not over the public sidewalk but as the building sets a little back it was just far enough from over the sidewalk to escape the penalty of the law. In justice to Mr. Jackson we will say that the sign was in the same place as the sign of his predecessor. The sign is more attractive where it is now, looks more like business and the street looks cleaner and better right there. There are a few other signs "just off the sidewalk" and it is hoped that the men whose names adorn the signs will catch the spirit for the welfare of the town and especially the village, and incidentally speak a good word for themselves.

Base Ball.

This was the most interesting game played between Norway and Bryant Pond this season, it being a close score throughout the game. Rich pitched great ball for Bryant Pond.

Democratic Rally.

A large and enthusiastic audience attended the Democratic rally at the Norway Opera House, Monday evening.

Lumley Castle Band of South Paris furnished the music for the evening, which was well appreciated.

The meeting was called to order by M. L. Kimball of Norway, a member of the Democratic district committee for Oxford county. He spoke briefly on the U. S. senatorial question, and drew an interesting comparison between E. C. Burleigh, the Republican candidate for senator, and Obadiah Gardner, the Democratic candidate. In closing he paid a loyal tribute to the memory of the late Hon. Herbert M. Heath. He introduced Hon. D. J. McGillicuddy, a member of Congress, as speaker of the evening.

Mr. McGillicuddy in his opening remarks said that the people who greeted him on an occasion of this nature were present as American citizens who wanted to learn what is best and to do it and by the large numbers present it showed a treat interest in the great problems; it also showed people were beginning to think for themselves and to cipher out these questions. The Republican party a short time ago said:—"We are all right—there is no trouble,"—but there was evidently trouble enough to split the party, and something was wrong. We are the wealthiest country in the world, and the hardest working people. Wealth is in the hands of a few,—the people who have produced the wealth have not received it, but it has gone into the coffers of the 51 multi-millionaires, of which is Rockefellow, Carnaigie, Vanderbilt, Barker and the rest. The trouble is, the masses of the people earn the money while the trusts take the benefit.

During the course of his address he spoke of being on the investigating committee of the steel trust and learned the inside workings, and other trusts are similar. The trust was formed in 1901, and instead of an honest corporation, ⅓ of its stock was watered stock, which was making money from nothing. Trusts came about on account of the high tariff. It was stated at the time that if there was a high tariff, capitalists would combine in trusts and demand their prices and it has been done.

The tariff at the out-set was to aid the small industries at home, but the excessive tariff is wrong, when goods can be bought cheaper abroad than at home.

He spoke of many of the bills introduced into the house by the Democrats, and we did away with Cannonism, and introduced many bills where large numbers of Republicans as well as Democrats came over onto our side and voted in favor but failed to pass through the senate, or if it did was vetoed by Taft.

Congressman McGillicuddy was listened to attentively and was frequently interrupted by applause.

H., where after a ministry of 12 years he was forced to resign in 1910 because of ill health, Dr. Bolster was an interesting and forceful preacher, a faithful and sympathetic pastor, a warm and genial friend and a man of quiet but real constructive influence in the places where he lived. The Spring of Providence.

It is said in the courtyard at Andersonville prison, after a heavy rain a spring of living water made its appearance. It was hailed as a perfect God-send by thousands of the boys in blue who were imprisoned there.

The fact has given rise to the following lines:—

There 'tis, in the courtyard flowing free,
Men were in despair but yesterday,
For the water was stagnant as it could be,
"And they said we can but die, anyway."
Let us call it The Spring of Providence,
Cried the boy in blue as he raised a prayer,
Our thirst to slake in this awful suspense
The hand of God has placed it there.
It bubbles there, in the courtyard grim,
This side of the dead line, too, it lies;
Where all may drink without fear of him,
Yon sentry, ever before our eyes.
God and His angels placed it there,
Or haply, the Man of Galilee,
Who gave His life, that men might share,
Light and truth and liberty.
And many a boy as he drank from that spring,
Thought of the dear ones he had left behind
In the old home nest fully questioning:
Where is our boy so brave and kind?
Languishing maybe, at Andersonville
Shut away with his comrades in prison, there,
Now the flower that blooms on your bosom, still
Blooms on in the Garden of God's care.
Sick, and wounded and ready to die,
Full of fever and full of pain,
I see that line neath a Southern sky,
Naked and ragged, come again and again,
And slake the thirst at that sparkling rill,
Gurgling and bubbling all pure and sweet,
Would to God, the food was as free from ill,
The boys in blue were forced to eat.
Andersonville prison is now no more,
Yet the little spring, it bubbles still,
In the ruined courtyard and o'er and o'er,
This great thought the mind must thrill:
He loveth and careth with us to abide,
He sendeth His angels watch to keep,
While Want and Famine, all haggard-eyed,
Banish the wonderful balm of sleep.
He who cometh from the jaws of death
Out from that living tomb so ill,
Will ne'er forget while he has breath,
The untold horrows of Andersonville.

DANA HARLOWE.

At the Telephone.

I

"Hullo!"
Silence.
"Hullo!"
Silence.
"Hullo!"
Voice with a cold, at the other end, "Number please?"
"I've been waiting for five minutes to give you the number. Why can't you answer when I call? Double five three Belgravia.
Silence
"Hullo! Are you there?"
Silence.
"Hullo!!!"
Silence.
Violent jerking of trigger, in the fond hope that something is happening at the other end to cause acute annoyance.
Dejected voice, "Number please."
"Oh, double five three Belgravia." Further comment suppressed with difficulty.
Voice answers something suspiciously like, "Double dide three."
Long silence.
Crisp voice at other end. "Hullo!"
"Hullo! Is that Mr. Gordan's house? Is Mr. Gordan in?"
Crisp voice. This is Hollins & Son. You have got the wrong number."
Resignedly, "Of course, I have.
Period of energetic trigger play.
Dejected voice, "Dumber please."
"You've given me the wrong number. That's the third this morning. Will you take the trouble to listen? Double five—f-i-v-e—five—three Belgravia.
Silence.
"Are you there? Have you got it right?
Silence.
Trigger play.
Dejected voice, "Dumber engaged."

II

"Hullo!—Hullo!!—Hullo!!!"
"Dumber please."
"Double five three Belgravia."
Silence.
Sudden burst of spirited conversation: "Well, of course, I wasn't going to stand anything like that. Would you?"
"Oh, my dear, What did you say?"
"What did I say? I wish you'd heard me. I don't think he'll come home at that time of night again. I'll tell you what I said—"
Sudden silence.
Dejected voice: "Have they answered?"
Snappily: "No."
Silence.
Hopeful sound at other end suddenly cut short.
Man's voice at last: "Hullo!"
"Hullo, Jim is that you?"
"Yes, is that——?"
Sudden Silence.
Dejected voice: "Dumbar edgaged."
Trigger jerked for lengthy period, but discovered to be inadequate to express feelings of impotent anger and desire to give them vent.
Dejected voice: "Dumber, please."
"I had the number. You cut me off just as I was begining to speak. Will you give me double five three Belgravia and let me have a chance of talking?"
Silence. Followered by crisp voice from Hollins & Son, as before.
Trigger.
Language.
Silence.
"Dumbar engaged."

III

"Hullo!"
Dejected voice, instantly: "Dumbar, please."
"Oh, you're there! Now do you think you could get me a right number for a change and let me have five minutes' peaceful conversation with a friend?"
"Dumber, please."
"Double three five Belgravia. Not doublt nine three."
Dejected voice: "Double dide three Bel,".
"No! Double five three. Do you hear? Are you there?
Silence.
Crisp voice: "Hullo!"
"If you're Hollins & Co., I don't want you. Go away! Oh, this is—!
Trigger.
"Dumbar, please."
"Will you or will you not give me double five three Belgravia? Three times—three separate times—you've given me—"
"I gave you double five three."
"You did not. If this goes on I shall—Are you there?"
Silence.
Trigger.
Silence.
"Dumbar, please."
"Double—five—three Belgravia."
Man's voice: "Hullo!"
"Is that you, Gordon? I've been trying to get you for the last hour. I'm almost beside myself. Is this telephone any use to anybody? It's perfectly maddening. Look here; I want to know if you can.
Dejected voice: "Have you finished?"
"No. Go away! Gordon! Are you there?"
"Lady's voice: "Is that you Bertha, dear, at last? I've been trying to get on to you the whole morning. They would keep putting me onto a wrong number."
With frenzied politeness: "You're on a wrong number now. I'm——"
Dejected voice: "Have you finished?"
With clenched teeth: "You've cut me off in the middle of a conversation again."
"I want to know who you are. I'm going to make a strong complaint. Send the manager of the exchange to me. Do you hear? Are you there? Exchange?"
Trigger.
Dejected voice: "Dumbar, please."
With ominous calm: "I want number double five three Belgravia. But before you get the number I want to tell you what I think of you."
Dejected voice: "Dumbar edgaged."

Are We Soon to See by Wire?

Laugh, if you will, at the apparent folly of seeing by wire, but in the midst of your mirth please do not forget that our grandfathers laughed just as heartily when there was rumor of talking over wires. And, if anyone had intimated that future generations would even talk without the aid of wires, over thousands of miles of ocean, grandad would have passed away with a stroke of apoplexy superinduced by congested laughter.

When it is remembered that the voice can be reproduced by mechanical means, inasmuch as it is but a series of vibrations in the air; that vision is but another kind of vibration in the ether, it looks as though seeing over wires would be quite as simple as talking over the telephone. The time may come, and not so very far away either, when we will pick up the telephone and not only talk with our friends, hundreds of miles away, but see them quite distinctly as well.

Electricity travels at nearly the same speed as light, 186,000 miles a second, and it is planned to change the light vibrations into electrical vibrations, send them over the wire, and then change them back into light vibrations, which will be visible to the naked eye. This is exactly what occurs in a telephone in a much simpler way. The sound waves are changed into electric waves, these electric waves waves are flashed over a wire and the receiver changes them back again into sound waves with the aid of a delicate magnet and a metal disk.

Prof. Rosing, of the Technological Institute of St. Petersburg has already accomplished much in sending rays of light over a wire with the assistance of electricity. The Rosing apparatus is as yet in its infancy, but very small objects can be seen with it and it is only reasonable to suppose that within a short time we will be able to see a person while speaking to him over the telephone.

FLYING MEN FALL

victims to stomach, liver and kidney troubles just like other people, with like results in loss of appetite, backache nervousness, headache, and tired, listless, rundown feeling. But there's no need to feel like that as T. D. Peebles, Henry, Tenn., proved. "Six bottle of Electric Bitters" he writes, "did more to give me new strength and good appetite than all other stomach remedies I used." So they help everybody. It's folly to suffer when this great remedy will help you from the first dose. Try it. Only 50 cents at The Noyes Drug Store. 31-35

A Check Book Makes all Your Money Available at any Moment and You Can Always make the Exact Change When Paying a Bill By Check

When you carry around the currency in your pocket and laboriously count out the money every time you wish to pay a bill, there is the danger that two bills may stick together or perhaps the party you pay may lose a bill and so think you did not pay him enough. Then, too, unless you ask for a receipt each time there is always the likelihood of having to pay the same bill twice. Another inconvenience when paying money is the difficulty of making the exact change, or if you wish to send money away there is the expense of purchasing a Draft or Money Order.

By depositing your money in this Strong National Bank you make it absolutely safe from loss by robbers, fire or accident and yet it is available at any moment. Whenever you desire to use all or any part of it draw a check for the exact amount wanted and either give it or mail it to the party owed. The Bank at the end of the month returns these cancelled checks to you and each check bears the endorsement of the party you paid. By looking over your cancelled checks you can find out instantly when, what for and to whom you paid your money and each check is a receipt in itself for the bill paid.

We invite you to test the truth of these statements by opening an account at this Bank.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

When Mr. Wolf Came to Call On the Kids

The Oldest Kid Looked Out of the Window.

DADDY had wondered for the ninety-ninth time what he should talk about, for, of course, Jack and Evelyn would not let him off from the bedtime story.

"In one of the loneliest woods once lived Mrs. Goat with her family of three little kids," he began.

"Mrs. Goat always told the young ones to shut the door after she had gone out and lock it. 'Don't let any one in while I'm away.'

"'Here's your Uncle Baa Baa come to visit you,' the wolf said one day outside the door in a voice he tried to make as much like a sheep's as he could. He wore a sheepskin over his back.

"'It's odd mother had never said anything to us about having an Uncle Baa Baa,' said the eldest kid, 'but I'm going to look out.'

"'He looks like a quiet old sheep,' said the eldest kid.

"And the second kid climbed up and looked at Mr. Wolf.

"'If he is our old uncle it would be very rude of us to keep him outside, she said as she climbed down.

"But the third kid wouldn't look out.

"'Mother told us not to open the door for any one, and we must obey her,' she said. 'If he's really our good old uncle he won't mind waiting outside till mother comes.'

"But the eldest kid said she would just open the door on a wee, wee crack to get a better look at him. As soon as Mr. Wolf saw the crack he pushed hard and in a minute was inside the cottage. He dropped the skeepskin in getting inside.

"'Quick, sisters, to the loft!' cried the youngest kid, springing up the rope ladder, and they hadn't a minute to spare in getting out of Mr. Wolf's way.

"He would have followed the kids to the loft, for he was hungry as could be, but the youngest kid had whisked the ladder up out of his reach.

"When Mrs. Goat got home there was Mr. Wolf sniffing about the house looking for a morsel to eat.

"Down went Mrs. Goat's head, and quickly she sent him spinning out of the cottage. He carried the marks of her horns in his hide for many a day.

"And then Mrs. Goat shut and locked the door and called the kids from the loft. After she had heard their story she gave them their supper of milk porridge and said:

"'You, Littlest Kid, have done well, and so you shall have a cheese cake with your porridge, but you, Eldest Kid, and you, Second Kid, have been foolish and can have none.'"

HOW TO IMPROVE FARM STOCK

The Importance of Always Breeding Straight.

One of the prime objects in mating farm animals is to increase the hardiness. No matter what other merits the sire or dam may have, if they are not strongly constituted they will not impart that vigor which is so necessary for successful growth. Strictly thoroughbreds are not always in the pink of condition. They are very apt to have a weakness that if imparted to the offspring will result in failure. So that when it comes to mating farm animals one of the most intricate and difficult problems that one might be required to solve is presented, and there should not be any rash ventures made.

Those who are affected with the cross craze, whether in hogs, cattle or horses, should select the breed that suits them best. As a general thing the best breed for any one is the breed one likes best or of which one can secure well bred sires with the least trouble and expense. If a man likes Poland China and can get good sires of that breed he should by all means breed Poland Chinas; if Chester Whites, he should select that breed. If he likes Tamworths for the good they can do, especially if he has his pigs come in May and June and keeps them through the year, then he should get the Tamworths.

Then in selecting males always have the breeder give an extended pedigree—that is, a pedigree that will show the breeding for at least four generations on each side. Note how often it goes back to some particular sire. Running back two or three times would not be objectionable, possibly would be desirable, but one should be sure that he is not breeding so close in line as to injure the vitality of the herd.

A GLASS SHOWER.

How to Arrange a Delightful Affair of This Kind.

Glass is another shower that is new and is most welcome to the bride elect. It not only includes the ordinary glass furnishings of the dining room closet and sideboard, but dozens of useful things for the kitchen, many of which were unknown ten years ago.

This is called a crystal shower. Invitations might be written on isinglass and they might invite the prospective guests to a crystal luncheon on a certain day and date. A postscript, which is, of course, omitted on the invitation card of the future bride, announces a crystal (glass) shower to follow the luncheon and invites each guest to send in advance of the date any crystal contribution which she wishes to make, ticketed with her name.

Naturally glass appointments are used as much as possible for the luncheon table setting. Every household boasts a certain number of these crystal appointments in the way of flower bowls, candlesticks, side dishes, saucers and the like. All the remainder which is necessary to carry out the effect can be added from the cheap glass goods in the ten cent stores. For the centerpiece have the glass slipper of Cinderella filled with candies or flowers.

How to Select Motor Truck Driver.

"Choose a motor truck driver as you would a first class clerk in your office or store; that is, be sure he is endowed with a certain amount of intelligence," says Gleeson Murphy, "and that you feel positive he is going to protect, guard and handle with good judgment the property intrusted in his care. There are enough good drivers now to discriminate when hiring one. Do not forget that when you send a man out with a truck he has in his charge property valued at several thousand dollars, and you want to feel safe that he is not going to abuse it. The good driver usually means a well kept, steadygoing vehicle, and a careless one the very opposite of this. Several instances have come to my notice that the least complaints were received from owners who had given some attention to reliability and competency in the hiring of drivers. The true mechanic has a certain regard for a piece of machinery, knows how to handle it under all road conditions, apprehends when the motor, clutch and transmission are working smoothly, uses good judgment in the matter of speed, and knows how to get the utmost service from the truck he drives and cares for."

How to Care For Wood Floors.

There is no reason for distress ove the care of wood floors if they are properly "finished" when laid. A natural wood floor can easily be kept in perfect order. Frequently wipe the floor with a dampened not a wet cloth and do not use hot water. Never touch the floor with a scrubbing brush nor with a broom. Never use a washing powder of any kind or a cleanser. If it is so soiled that it needs more than cool water use a little castile soap and wipe dry with a chamois. To remove any waxy substance that castile soap will not remove use a woolen cloth dampened with kerosene and rub off quickly. Never touch any floor or other varnished object with kerosene except in an emergency as above prescribed.

How to Make an Egg Salad.

A delicious salad may be made from eggs and green peppers. Boil the eggs hard and when cold cut the whites in rings and the yolks into dice. Have ready also an equal amount of shredded green peppers. Mix the eggs and peppers. Place them on lettuce leaves and serve them in individual dishes. Pour over the salad a French dressing. Green pepper cups make nice holders for this salad.

IVY POISONING.

How to Get Relief From This Painful Rash.

Poisoning the skin by poison ivy (Rhus toxicodendron) is frequent in the summer and the early autumn. Some fortunate persons are not susceptible, but most are poisoned if they come into direct contact with the plant, says the Youth's Companion.

The disorder causes discomfort always and sometimes suffering. It shows itself within a few hours with redness, heat and irritation of the skin, swelling and the formation of small vesicles. These vesicles may occur in great numbers. Often many of them coalesce to form blisters, and they also break and exude a sticky yellowish serum. It is this fluid that by its escape spreads the disease to the adjacent skin or to the face and other parts of the body.

The swelling may be so considerable as completely to close the eyes. As a rule, the acute symptoms continue several days, at the end of which time the vesicles either discharge or crust over and the swelling and redness slowly disappear. In this stage the itching may be intense and is likely to provoke repeated scratching, which may in turn bring about eczema.

The best way to treat ivy poisoning is simple. The inflamed skin should be copiously washed with lukewarm water and a soap that does not irritate. The parts affected should then be bathed with a watery solution of permanganate of potash as hot as can be borne. If the skin is broken a per cent solution should be used; if the skin is not broken, however, the strength of the solution may be increased up to 2 or 3 per cent. Treatment should begin the instant symptoms are observed.

In mild cases one treatment is enough. Occasionally the poison is more deeply seated, and the permanganate must be applied for some time. In these cases and in the extremely rare instances of systemic infection due to the entrance of the poison into the circulation a physician must be called.

The patient must avoid scratching of course. Bandages are undesirable because they tend to spread the poison over the surrounding skin. If any protector is needed let it be a loosely applied dressing of absorbent cotton and gauze, changed frequently and kept moist at all times with warm water containing a little bicarbonate of soda.

Permanganate of potash discolors everything with which it comes in contact and stains the skin a deep brown color, but that is a small price to pay for the relief it affords. The stain will wear off in a few days or it can be removed by vigorous applications of soap and water. In the healing stages of the disorder soothing ointments may be used.

Message from the Spirit World.

We want to teach men better than to have war and strife with each other while on earth, for it is an injury to all the race to cause so much suffering as all wars bring, and we want to teach the laws of the Spirit to man while in the form, then he will develop much faster while on earth, and in course of time mankind will become elevated and purified, even on earth, and the sooner we can teach the Divine laws to men in the form, even as men teach the laws of man to man in the earthly conditions, the better it will be for all mankind, for it is the Spirit and not the body that lives Eternal.

Mankind should develop the Soul instead of the body, for all earthly things are useful only as they are are used to develop the spirit for its final destiny, which is perfection itself, and none can enter the bright place of light and Harmony, unless pure in Spirit and cleansed from all earthly things, and this is in harmony with the Divine laws of Nature, which most of men do not understand or comprehend while in the form, but as soon as the Spirit leaves the form it then begins to learn the true life principles of Nature's laws, and when we can once get mankind to understand the laws of the Spirit they will become willing students.

Then we from this side can work in harmony with man while in the form, and teach the higher laws of the Spheres where the Spirit will dwell when it crosses the line of division between the two worlds, and this all must be sooner or later, and this being the truth, it is of the most importance to every man and woman to know how to live while in the fartherest state of advancement when it entered the Spirit world, so as to go to the best place of peace and love, for there are many Spheres and all will go to the one in harmony with their being when they first leave the form, and this is one of the Divine laws of the Divine mind which all have to obey and learn in order to develop to the highest state of perfection, which is purity and goodness itself, and the purer and better man or woman is while in the form, the better they will be when they leave it, for all things are based on truth and purity and goodness, and we wish to teach this to all men so they will cease from all evil and become as brothers, for they will find that they injuring themselves by evil deeds more than another. Even Jesus himself was crucified, and it showed the ignorance of the men who did it, for had they known these laws of the Spirit they would not have crucified him, but it did more good to the world as it was, for it showed the wickedness of mankind, and he only told them the truth and pointed out their evil ways and strove to teach them to become better men and women, and not to defraud one another while in the form, for it was wrong and they would have to suffer for all evil committed but mankind did not understand him and thought him an imposter, hence he was cruelly put to death by ignorant men so that he could not trouble their evil spirit.

For it caused them much trouble, and has ever caused the evil wicked man to tremble for his evil ways and for persecuting his brother man, but this always has been and will continue until we can teach them that the spirit lives after it leaves the form, and when we have succeeded in teaching the laws of the Spirit to all Nations, there will be no more wars, and all mankind will be at peace on Earth, even as in the bright place where Saints immortal dwell, where all is as bright as the beautiful Spheres of the Suns, which gives light to the Planets on which all men live, and which all will sooner or later leave for other Spheres.

The above message is just as it was written, word for word, my right arm and hand being electrified and moved mechanically, by a power foreign to myself to write; when one word was being written, I did not know what the next would be until it appeared on paper. It was written in about fifteen minutes. The message itself is absolute, positive proof that there is a future life, and there is communication between the two worlds. C. E. BROWN.

The officials:—Starter, Roscoe G. Knight; judges, John S. Heald, F. M. Hunnewell, Charles G. Keene; timers, Gardner Walker, Elmer Wentworth, Daniel G. Chaplin.

The shouting of men, the cackle of hens, the lowing of cattle, the baaing of sheep, the grunting of hogs, the screaming of toy whistles, the barking of the midway hawkers and bally-hoo men and the clang of the starter's gong were a few of the noises that were recognized as familliar.

Everything that goes to make up a country fair is there—everything from the crazy quilt that grandma made without the aid of "specs" to the rubber collars; from the hot frankforts, smeared all over with mustard, to the home-made ice cream; from the soft drink eporiums to the popcorn stands.

Yes, everything is there, endless opportunities to spend one's collection of nickles and dimes to receive in return just as much as the spirit which you are in will permit. You can sport in the lapel of your coat a picture of your beaming mug or you can step into a big tent and have a tintype made for you which will be a valuable addition to the collection in the family album.

You can eat pop corn until you are ready to burst. You can drink lemonade until you feel as though you were water-logged. You can throw base balls until your throwing arm is ready to drop off. And you can for 35 cents eat to your stomach's content in the association dining hall under the grand stand. There is nothing left to be desired. Not even the merry-go-round. Music by Limington band.

The program of the morning was devoted almost wholly to the pulling matches and even then they were not completed. These events attracted a big crowd, in fact they had the midway almost deserted for a time. Yoke after yoke of the hondsomest oxen to be found in the State exhibited their strength at the point of the ever penetrating brad that tipped the goal which was manipulated by the most skillful drivers who make use of the beasts of strength. It was a great exhibition, one that even the the unschooled enjoyed and admired.

Between 7,000 and 8,000 people passed through the gates, Wednesday.

The ball game resulted in a score of North Sebagos 7, Duponts 6. It was witnessed by 1,500 people.

In the fourth heat, when in turning off the back stretch in the second quarter, Tommy Johnson, driven by his owner, George Livingstone, missed his stride, tripped and fell. Driver Livingstone was thrown over the animal's head and landed all in a heap in the middle of the track. He was dazed by the fall but had the presence of mind to run to the fence and hug in close out of the way of the horses who were trailing him. His horse was entangled in the harness and unable to rise.

Both were assisted to the stable, where it was found that neither had suffered any serious injury. The man had sprained two fingers and received a slight shaking up.

Grand Opera Singer.

Smiling skies, balmy air and a very large and appreciative audience combined to make the appearance of the well known soprano, Mme. Olive Fremstad, at Odd Fellows' hall, Harrison, Tuesday evening a brilliant success.

Mme. Fremstad is one of the Metropolitan opera house artists, New York, and all were more than anxious to listen to her charming voice.

Mme. Fremstad was assisted by Myrna Sharlow, Mrs. McElroy Johnston, Ada Tuck, Mr. McElroy Johnston, Harold Hazlett and Annie McLeary and Mons. Murace Lafarge, pianist pupils of F. E. Bristol. All very generously gave their time and talents for the benefit of the Harrison public library.

The library building was erected in 1908. It is known as the Caswell library, having been made possible by the liberrlity of one of Harrison's former citizen's, Daniel Caswell of Texas.

This is indeed a worthy object for which to labor and the citizens of Harrison are loud in their praises of the city friends who so kindly contribute to the financial needs of the library.

Seldom is a country village privileged with such a rare musical treat as this. The ability of all the participants in the concert is assured when we say they have been pupils of Prof. F. E. Bristol of New York, who is well-known in this vicinity.

The concert was a grand success and the proceeds were phenominal.

SNAPSHOTS AT NOTABLES

Carmi A. Thompson, President Taft's Secretary.

Carmi Alexander Thompson of Ohio, who succeeds C. D. Hilles as secretary to President Taft, was formerly a coal miner and got his first start in life as a wielder of the pick. Since that long ago day, however, he steadily moved upward and for many years has been a prominent figure in Ohio politics.

A native of West Virginia and forty-two years old, Mr. Thompson has spent most of his life at Ironton, O. By working in the mines he earned enough money to get a high school education and then took an academic course in the Ohio State university. Two years of teaching and more saving enabled him to take a law course at the same institution. In 1895 he was admitted to the bar, and he began practice at Ironton. After a term as city solicitor he went to the legislature and was speaker of the house in 1906-7. Then he was elected secretary of state and re-elected two years later. At the close of his second term he was appointed assistant secretary of the interior at Washington, from which post he resigned to take the place made vacant by the selection of Mr. Hilles to manage President Taft's campaign.

Judge Dillon of Ohio.

Judge Edmund B. Dillon of Columbus, who was nominated for governor by the Ohio Republicans and subsequently withdrew from the ticket, took that unusual step because of the determination of the Roosevelt party to put up a third ticket in the state.

The nomination of Judge Dillon was made against his own wish. When the delegates were gathered for the state convention he steadfastly refused to allow his name to be used in connection with the governorship, wanting only the nomination for judge of the supreme court. After several ballots had been taken a stampede was started for Judge Dillon, and he was on the fifth ballot nominated.

Judge Dillon thought when he was nominated that his selection marked the end of the new party movement in the state, and in a brief speech to the convention accepting the nomination he said, "I will give to the party and the people of the state the best that is in me."

EDMUND B. DILLON.

On the bench Judge Dillon has won an enviable reputation and is now serving his third term in the court of common pleas. He is a native of the Buckeye State and is forty-three years old. His education was acquired in the schools of Portsmouth, O., and at Ohio Wesleyan university. He studied law at London, O., and was admitted to practice in 1891, hanging out his shingle at Columbus. Before his elevation to the bench in 1902 Judge Dillon was for several years attorney for the dairy and food department of the state of Ohio.

"Unclassed."

Mother was dandling baby on her knee and muttering the usual fondly foolish remarks.

Tommy, aged nine and a baseball enthusiast, sat on the other side of the hearth studying the evening paper's reports and trying not to listen.

"O-oh little wee petsy-wetsy!" chanted mother. "Mumsey's little darling and dadsy's darling! Um's precious, um is! Mumsy wouldn't sell you for a million dollars!"

Tommy felt it was time he spoke.

"Oh, mother," he said reprovingly, "a million dollars! Why, Barney Dreyfuss only paid $22,500 for O'Toole!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Shut Out the Alps.

They were on a trip in Switzerland and had that day braved all dangers and ascended one of the highest points in the Alps.

He was very fat, and as he stood panting and mopping his brow at the top of the mountain he turned to his wife and said, with pathos in his voice:

"See, dear, how small one is in the face of the immensity of nature."

"Small, indeed!" answered his better half. "Why, you're standing in front of me, hiding the whole of Mont Blanc and the best part of the valley of Chamonix!"—Milwaukee News.

True Art.

Mr.—I wonder what that painting represents? The youth and maiden seem to be in such a tender mood.

Mrs.—Oh, don't you see, dear? He has just asked her to marry him, and she is accepting him.

Mr.—Ah, that's so! The title is very appropriate too.

Mrs.—I don't see any title.

Mr.—Why, that card at the bottom, which says "Sold!"

Fully Explained.

"And what is the Democratic party?"

Box Packing Demonstrations.

The State Horticulturist sends out the following: The Department of Agriculture at Augusta is planning to give a number of box packing demonstrations this fall and will be pleased to hear from growers that desire such a meeting in their orchard.

The Department will furnish press packing table, boxes and paper so that no expense will be incurred by the grower other than transportation from the nearest railroad station.

The increased number of orchardists that are spraying and giving good care to their trees must necessarily increase the amount of fruit fit for box pack and it seems important at this time to demonstrate the different packs and manner of packing so that better work along this line may be accomplished.

Individuals or Granges that are interested will receive prompt attention by writing the Department at the earliest opportunity.

Looking Backward

In Otisfield.

No. 3.

The mention in last week's sketch of my early school days and the bright memories of my teachers suggests a reference to methods of discipline and the influence of a commanding personality possessed by the master or mistress in the schoolroom. The use of the birch or beech rod, or a rawhide for the punishment of refractory young men or big boy pupils seventy-five years ago was a common custom. And to my certain knowledge, even little boys, for trivial offences, or for no offence other than a failure to recite a lesson in geography correctly in the use of the map of a foreign country, have, in the hands of a young male teacher of irascible temper, been subjected to a severe flogging.

Many narratives are extant of the conflicts between master and pupil in the schoolroom; but generally in case of disobedience of rules, or defiance of authority, the culprit would take his medicine without resistance. The writer remembers seeing a squad of young men of mature growth submit to severe ferruling on the hands without any visible emotion except a tear in the eye of one of the youngest. That was at Bolster's Mills back in the 40s and the master was William C. Green of Otisfield.

Occasionally in the olden time a woman teacher was found with courage and educational accomplishment sufficient to undertake the management and instruction of a country winter school. An authentic tradition was common in Otisfield in my boyhood concerning the exploits of a lady teacher in a school comprising a few young men of voting size and perhaps of age; for such a condition of things was common in those days, and the young woman of my little story had no scruples against thrashing a voting citizen if he deserved it.

The teacher of whom the incident is related was Miss Ann Knight, an elder sister of my first teacher. She was of a family of sisters, several of whom had much local renown for their fitness and efficiency to cope with most school demands of their day. This lady became the wife of Amos P. Foster of Harrison and was for many years a most esteemed citizen and gentlewoman, and the mother of a family of whom but one survives. I refer to Mrs. S. D. Andrews of Norway.

From about 1785 to 1790, while Dr. David Ray was in the prime of life and in control of the business activities established by him in the uses of the excellent water-power at the outlet of Saturday Pond, and for a quarter of a century or more thereafter, Holdenville was one of the principal centers for supplying the needs of the people of the town and of some other towns.

The annals of that time tell of the first settlers of Harrison and of Norway carrying their grists of corn and rye on handsleds in winter, or on their shoulders, to Ray's gristmill at Saturday Pond. And the sawmill there, with its old-fashioned mill saw, that in seasons of low water and failing power used to "go up in the forenoon and down in the afternoon," as some facetious boy described it—it was so slow you see—that sawmill furnished a large proportion of the lumber for the construction of the dwelling houses and other buildings for a new population coming in from Massachusetts and from the earlier settled parts of Maine. One of the first sounds I can remember in my home a quarter mile away was the music of the filing of the mill-saw ringing out above the noise of the rushing brook.

In the disposition of Dr. Ray's landed estate and mill property the mills came into the possession of the Morse family by inheritance and they were known for years after as "Morse's Mills," and were operated by different persons for the proprietors for many years.

The first miller that I can remember was an old man who was known as "Dr. Morse." He was not related to the Morse family who owned the mills, but was a nice old man and a popular miller. He lived alone, I think, in a small house near the edge of the small mill-pond, long ago removed or demolished.

Dan Morse, who married Eunice Ray, eldest daughter of Dr. David Ray, the pioneer settler of Holdenville, lived a little way from the old Ray mansion, the residence of Henry Holden and his big family. The Morse house is the only one left to this day, and is one of the oldest in town.

Deacon Elijah Scribner was the successor of Dr. Morse as operator of the grist mill. He came to Holdenville about 1836 with his family and lived for years in the Morse house after the Morse family moved to Harrison village. The business of sawing shingles was a lively branch of the lumber trade for many years.

I cannot distinctly remember who carried on the saw-mill for the Morse owners but I think one of them was Columbus Holden, eldest son of Henry Holden, whose wife was Abigail Ray, youngest daughter of Dr. Ray, the pioneer.

Columbus Holden was always interested in saw-mills and was a very competent mill-wright and constructor of water-machinery all his life.

Other sons of Henry Holden were skilled operators of saw-mills, particularly Joseph W. Holden, whose principal business investments consisted of ownership of saw-mills for many years.

But Holdenville, though about "holding its own" with respect to local business in 1840, was waiting for a reanimation of her flagging industries. It came in the early decade, and for several years the little hamlet was a scene of business activities greater than had ever happened before. It was the Renaissance of Holdenville. Renaissance is a French word, and means a revival of anything lost or become extinct. The term is used advisedly, although the old first mill-plant and its dependent business had not been quite extinguished. The precise year of the beginning of the establishment of new trades and professions in Holdenville, I am unable to state; but it was about the beginning of 4th decade of the century, and the administration of President William Henry Harrison. It was a time for several years of remarkable religious revivals and great additions to the membership of all the churches.

I believe the first symptom of new life in the quiet place was the advent of Giles Sburtleff from Paris, I think, who, with Elijah Scribner purchased the Morse mill property, and with improved equipment the saw-mill and other mills were soon humming with business. Very soon there came Levi T. Boothby, a young man and a skilled blacksmith, who worked in the shop vacated by the removal of David R. Morse from town.

David Morse was the only son of Uncle Dan Morse already mentioned. His wife was Betsey Roby, daughter of Rev. Thomas Roby, the first minister settled as pastor of the Congregational church of Otisfield. Another blacksmith, a fine workman, successor to Boothby, I think, was Aaron Riggs, who was noted for his skill in making and tempering tools of steel.

Then came Miss Eliza Shurtleff, a milliner, who had a shop in the Morse house, occupied by her brother Giles' family. Dr. Jonathan Small, an educated physician, also came and had his residence and a medical dispensary in the mill-house, the former home of Dr. Morse, the old miller. Another representative of the learned professions in the new invasion was Simeon Perkins, esq., a lawyer, from Minot, I think.

There was a store of groceries and other goods for a while in the ell of the Morse house, but I do not remember who kept it. Harry Gould was also of the new colony, who was an apprentice of Aaron Riggs, the blacksmith. These accessions to the population and business interests of Holdenville were supplemented by the erection of several new buildings.

William Smith, who had learned the shoemaker's trade with G. W. Barrows, came to join the new enterprises being planted there, and erected a two-story building near the Holden residence for a dwelling house and shop. Adjoining this on the south, Benjamin Holden, a son of Uncle Henry Holden, erected another two-story building in a part of which he had a residence for his family, and in another part was a shop for carriage making. His partner in this enterprise was Francis Reed, a son of Samuel Reed, who lived up on the road toward Bell Hill church.

In this brief review of the situation in Holdenville in the early 40s we observe a little compact community of earnest, busy workers operating a variety of industries sufficient for the needs of a large rural population. And right well did they serve the public for a few years.

The causes of the decline of the business activities of Holdenville in the last century are difficult to state at this remote date. Perhaps, the failure to locate the Grand Trunk R. R. through that section of Otisfield, which was at one time anticipated, might have caused the abandonment of the effort to develop Holdenville into a greater mart of trade and commercial importance. But, like Rome, and many other examples of the mutations of cities and empires, the little colony began soon to dissolve and in a few years, almost without notice, Holdenville had become about as quiet as ten years before.

The principal representative of the staunch, unquenchable spirit of progress and enterprise remaining in the years after was in the person of Wiliam C. Smith, who by indomitable perseverance and a genius for compelling surrounding conditions to conform to his will, had, in a few years become the owner of several tracts of land and was prospering in his trade and as a farmer. He married for his first wife, Deborah, the beautiful eldest daughter of Henry and Abigail Holden, who soon passed to the other life, and in the process of time Mr. Smith married Abigail, the second daughter of the family.

He built in or about the year 1844 the brick house in which he lived the remaining years of his life, and in which were born and reared a daughter, Clara, and two sons, Charles and William Smith, the latter of whom occupies the same homestead as successor to his parents. That brick house is the only dwelling house standing, erected during the period of which the above history is written. William C. Smith was a man, who, from humble origin, by force of character grew to an honorable manhood and in the respect and esteem of his townsmen, was promoted to positions of public trust and as a represeetative in 1858 to the State Legislature.

Around Holdenville, its beautiful pond where I learned to swim, in which grew the most delicate and fragrant white lilies I ever have seen, the scene of my early school associations, the skating and sliding down the long hill—sometimes into the mill-brook, ha-ha!—all these and many more incidents crowd upon my memory, and I almost wish I could be a boy again!

Bring cotton, lint and vaseline,
This class meets sharp at ten,
And tonsils will be snipped off clean—
Nor trouble you again.

Old Home Day.

Thursday, Aug. 15th, was observed as Old Home Day at Casco village and many out of town guests, who were formerly residents of this town, were present. It was a reunion of old friends and schoolmates and many reminiscences were exchanged and old times renewed.

A picnic dinner was served in the dining room of the Grange hall, the tables being divided into families with their invited guests.

In the afternoon the company adjourned to the hall above and the following program was given, William Holden of Hartford, Conn., being president of the day, and Rev. J. Albert Nichols, secretary, and Mark Leach, treasurer:—Overture, Home orchestra, consisting of Forrest Edmonds, clarinetist, Mrs. Grace Gay, Mrs. Ethel Leach and Clifford Eastman, violinists, with Celia Compton at the piano; opening prayer, Solomon Gay; singing "America," Old Folks' choir; greetings from absent friends read by president; singing "Swanee River," choir; remarks by president; singing, "Long, Long Ago," by Mr. Decker, over 80 years of age; informal speeches by different members of the audience. Frank Jordan spoke of the old-time spirit of sociability at their shelling bees, huskings, quiltings and singing schools. He also spoke of the loyalty of so many of the old residents, who, though they had moved away, wanted to be brought back to old Casco for burial. Mark Leach said he was glad to see so many visitors from away. He, himself, had looked forward to this day as a pleasant meeting with old friends.

Mr. Babb of Saco was called on and after a few remarks complimentary to the town also spoke of the high cost of living. He spoke of the advantage of using oxen for farm work instead of horses.

Mrs. Sylvester said there are two things in which Casco excels, its beautiful scenery and cordial welcome. Nothing warms the heart strings like someone glad to see you.

Mrs. Lawyer Lesser of Boston spoke of her travels abroad last year, but in all the scenery there she found nothing so beautiful to her as Casco, where she has spent her summers for 15 years.

Then followed a song by Isadora Bounds, music by the choir and a selection by the orchestra.

One delightful feature of the day was the reunion of the Brackett family, consisting of five sisters and two brothers as follows: Mrs. Solomon Gay, Mrs. Martha Gay and Mrs. Mary Holden (twins), Mrs. Anna Edwards, all of Casco, Mrs. George W. Bean of Lynn, Mass., Robert Brackett of Portland, John K. Brackett oof Casco. Mrs. W. H. Allison of Haverhill, Mass., a cousin of the family, was also present. An honored guest of the day was Mrs. Sylvester of Cambridge, Mass., mother of Herbert Milton Sylvester, the well-known writer. The best known of his books perhaps are "Homestead and Highways," "Prose Pastorals," "Romance of Casco Bay," and "Indian Wars of America."

George Sargent is finishing his new house.

Vinton Pike, jr., of St. Joseph, Mo., has been visiting his uncle, John B. Pike, esq.

Rev. John L. Sewall of Worcester, Mass., is located pleasantly at Rev. H. H. Hoyt's cottage at Barker Pond. He retains a vivid and pleasant remembrance that he was in Hiram with his father, a clergyman, fifty years ago.

Men and Brutes.

Sometimes when we see what passes for men handling what are generally supposed to be brutes we have some difficulty in determining which is really the man and which is really the brute. Contact with lower animals reveals the gentleman or the brute in man, and also reveals the better and worse nature of the brute.

We have seen men who never have a kind word for a horse, whose idea of handling a colt is that of breaking rather than training, and who constantly punish horses for their own mistakes. While there are some horses, which, like some men, are naturally vicious, speaking generally the horse reveals the character of the man who drives it. If he is a kind man and intelligent, the bearing of the horse will show it. If he is a nervous man, the horse, accustomed for ages to the guidance of man, shows it. We once saw a farmer attempt to drive a load of hay up an incline to unload in the barn. The horse evidently had no confidence in the judgement of the man and balked. A man who knew horses asked the owner to give him the lines. He spoke to them kindly and encouragingly, and they went up without hesitation or a break. Men do not make enough of their horses. The horse is really the partner of the man in farming operations; and will give his confidence and accept his guidance, if the man knows how to guide. The horse is naturally a timid animal and will flee rather than fight. Its timidity should be supplemented by man's courage.

You can tell a good deal about a man, if you see him milk his cows. The cow seems to understand a good milker. She has absolute confidence, and will give down readily and also yield larger amounts of milk, because she knows she is being handled by a true gentleman or a true lady.

We do not expect any man to learn much wisdom from the hog. The hog has less sympathy than any animal about the place except the cat, which is totally unregenerate, absolutely selfish, and has no sympathy at all. But even the hog knows a good master.

Sheep are such helpless and dependent animals through long ages of subjection, that they naturally depend on the shepherd's care. They have ages ago quit thinking for themselves; and therefore success in handling sheep depends more upon the man than anything else.

Who has not admired the devotion of the dog to man? Originally a wolf, cowardly, treacherous, and yet by association with men of the higher type he has become in the noblest forms almost human, intelligent, and, shall we say, reasoning? Certainly he has imbibed something of a sense of humor. So nearly human has he become that a farm boy's life is not complete without the companionship of a dog.

While these lower animals can not in a strict sense educate men, they are the occasion of a good deal of education; so much so that the character of a man can be pretty correctly estimated by the bearing that the lower animals on the farm maintain toward him. He should be their guide, philosopher, friend, benefactor; and all of them show more or less of their confidence in him or their fear of him, thus bringing out a good deal of the best and the worst that is in him. Their unspoken language is probably a better certificate of character or want of it than even his neighbors could give him; for his animals judge him without envy, and their judgment is pretty nearly just.

Mrs. Almore Haskell dropped dead Friday afternoon as her home in Harrison. Mrs. Haskell has been in poor health for some years but the end came very unexpectedly while she was engaged in some light work about the house.

She leaves beside her husband, a daughter, Mrs. James Stone, who resides at her parental home; one brother, Cornelius Bailey, and a sister, Nancy Perry, both of Turner. SAVE YOUR FENCEPOSTS.

Dip Their Ends In Creosote and They Will Last Twice as Long.

The Missouri experiment station has issued a circular on fenceposts, telling how to prolong their life. It says that wood does not decay for the same reason that iron rusts, but because the tissues of the wood are destroyed by low forms of life called fungi. This rot of the wood produces spores, which may be scattered by the wind and thus spread the decay.

A fencepost will decay most quickly at the surface of the ground, for there the conditions are most favorable for the growth of the fungi. Wood that was kept entirely under water would not decay for lack of air. Bog oak is dug from the swamps in Ireland, where it has lain for centuries, and then made into furniture.

Various methods are suggested for prolonging the life of fenceposts. Piling stones, ashes or gravel about the base will help, and so will setting the post in cement or concrete. It also pays to char the ends of the posts over an open fire, but the charred part should extend at least six inches above the ground. Creosote is a good material for preventing decay. A tank like the one shown in the picture given above can be used for this purpose. The arm of metal pipe is put over a fire, which causes the circulation and raises the temperature of the creosote. When treating, creosote is put into the tank, the fire is built under the arm and the temperature raised just above the boiling point. There ought to be enough of the creosote to cover the lower forty inches of the post. The posts are well seasoned with the bark peeled off. Then they are put down into the tank and kept there about two hours, after which they are ready to set.

This treatment will greatly lengthen the life of a post, and with creosote at 15 to 20 cents a gallon the cost will be 6 to 8 cents for a post and will practically double its life.

Good Investments.

Every dollar spent in buying needed equipment for the farm is an investment that the farmer should be glad to make. It is the duty of every farmer to keep posted upon new implements, and whenever one is found that saves labor and brings returns buy it for the farm.

ALFALFA "MUSTS."

Things to Observe if Grower Wants to Raise the Best Possible Crop.

These "musts" for the alfalfa grower were prepared by Professor W. H. Olin at the head of the extension department of the University of Idaho:

First.—Use only clean, vital, well acclimated seed.

Second.—Use, for alfalfa, land which has previously been well cultivated and which has good under drainage. Thorough drainage is chief among the requirements for this plant.

Third.—Preparation of seed bed must be thorough and should be on ground plowed in the fall for spring seeding and on spring plowed ground for fall seeding. No field crop pays richer revenues for thorough preparation than alfalfa.

Fourth.—Have your seed bed first well pulverized, then firm, next moist surface soil, devoid of hard lumps and well planked or leveled.

Fifth.—Sow on irrigated land with a drill evenly and at that rate of seeding which will give you a good stand, provided seed and bed are what they should be. Follow drill with a smoothing harrow as soon as possible, cross harrowing the field.

Sixth.—Prevent crusting of surface soil at period of germination and early stage of growth.

Seventh.—Use common sense and good judgment at all times.

Eighth.—An alfalfa renovator is an indispensable tool for cultivating alfalfa in the field.

Birds and Berries.

There are various ways of protecting berries from birds. On small patches fish net or any coarse netting is a good protection. Mosquito netting is not so desirable, as the fruit often does not mature so well under its close mesh. A favorite method in England is to stretch black thread back and forth above the berries. It is said that the birds are afraid of this.—Farm Journal.

Peas For Seed.

It is cheaper to buy seed peas than to waste the exertion of your vines in trying to mature them. Keep them picked as soon as large enough for the table and the usefulness of the vines will be prolonged.

Is your local market well supplied with fresh vegetables? It may pay you to look after this matter. There are splendid opportunities in vegetable gardening near many towns and cities.

How to Cook Canned Corn.

Remove the paper wrapper from the can. Drop can in a kettle of boiling water and cook it for fifteen or twenty minutes. Take out can with a cloth so as to avoid burning fingers, open it and turn the corn out on a hot dish. Add a lump of butter, a tablespoonful of cream, pepper and salt and you have a dish fit for a king.

Cattle Must be Tested

Attention is called to the law which requires that all cattle exhibited at the fairs to which the State gives aid shall be tuberculin tested within one year of the time of exhibit. Last year through some misunderstanding many of the exhibitors were not prepared when the time came for exhibiting, and under the circumstances were allowed to exhibit without a certificate. The Commissioner of Agriculture, J. P. Buckley, calls attention to the fact that all must have their animals tested before exhibiting them at the fairs in 1912. Section 11 of Chapter 195 of the Public Laws of 1911 reads as follows:

"Cattle used for dairy purposes or for breeding purposes that are to be shown in competition for prizes, in any state agricultural shows, Bangor, Waterville and Lewiston, shall be tested with tuberculin, within twelve months of the opening date of the exhibition where they are to be shown. Such test shall be made under the direction of the live stock sanitary commissioner, who shall furnish a certificate of such test, to the owner or owners of such animals. State agricultural associations who receive any aid from the State, shall demand a certificate of test, duly authorized by the live stock sanitary commissioner from owners of cattle that are to compete for prizes in accordance with the above, under penalty of forfeiture of such aid; calves under one year excepted." 34 35

NORTHEAST LOVELL.

Fair of Ladies' Christian Circle.

The annual fair of the ladies' Christian circle at Center Lovell was held Thursday, August 15th, and was a grand success in every way, although it began to rain about the time the sale of goods was to commence, but the ladies changed their plans a little and took their tables, which were out doors, and put them into the vestry with the rest of them and soon had them ready and everything put in order. At three o'clock the sale began. A number of people came to buy before the doors were opened. Each lady seemed to help and at each table there was a popular clerk, who did her best in selling.

Mrs. J. W. Card sold all kinds of fir pillows. Mrs. Douglass Volk and Mrs. Lyons sold rugs, large work aprons, quilts and kitchen supplies. Mrs. Less Stearns sold all kinds of nice homemade candy. Mrs. Horace Kimball and Mrs. Fred Brown sold all kinds of fancy articles.

Amo Umbsaetter sold a good number of all kinds of flowers. Mrs. Mellen Eastman, Mrs. Ben Russell and Alice Eastman were in charge of the ice cream and there were three kinds, chocolate, banana, vanilla, and sauces to go with it. At five o'clock the supper tables were ready laden with all kinds of nice food.

The partakers stayed and kept the waiters busy until 7:30 o'clock. The table waiters were Mrs. H. W. Palmer, Isabelie Andrews, Lucy Elliot, Mrs. Dana McAllister, Mrs. Otis Gilman.

At eight o'clock an entertainment was given in the church in charge of Mrs. Less Stearns and Mrs. Carrie Kimball and was as follows:

We were all sorry that there was sickness in the Garcelon family so that they were unable to furnish music, as we all look to Garcelon's orchestra for fine music on our annual fair days.

A large sum of money was received both in the afternoon and evening. We always leave the cleaning of the vestry until the next day and then the ladies who can leave their work at home for half a day go and wash dishes and other things which have to be done. Those who went this year were Mrs. George Eastman, Mrs. Freeman Andrews, Mrs. Elmer Kendall, Mrs. H. W. Palmer, Mrs. John Kimball and Isabelle Andrews.
